

To Our Friends, Associates, and Clients:

As we all try to navigate through these very uncertain times, both personally and professionally, we look to find the positives that will get us pointed in the right direction.

With all that needs to be done, it is comforting to know that through all of this, there are friends and partners that will always be there to provide the support and reassurance needed to make those tasks a little easier to achieve.

We at LPM understand that this by no means will be easy, but with creativity, effort, and hard work, we can overcome any situation and move forward to brighter and more prosperous times. We have an amazing team that is committed to providing a great dining experience to our customers, and I assure you that we are working diligently every day to bring together new innovative ideas, products, and processes, that will provide our customers with the confidence that they are visiting a safe and enjoyable food service environment. Safety remains our number one priority and the focus of our people now more than ever.

We look forward to welcoming back the familiar faces to our facilities and until then, we hope that you and your families remain safe and healthy throughout the remaining days of this crisis. "Never give up believing that there is hope for better days to come. Bad things happen for a reason and sometimes it is to bring us to those better days."
